The TWU-IAM Association today announced that mediation for negotiations in the American Airlines/TWU-IAM Association contract talks will restart on Monday, Sept. 16, at 1 p.m. ET and continue through Thursday, Sept. 19. The sessions will be held in Washington, D.C. at the National Mediation Board (NMB).

Association principals Sito Pantoja, Director (IAM General Vice President) and Alex Garcia, Vice Director (TWU International Executive Vice President) met with the NMB on Thursday, Aug. 29 to outline the Association's views on negotiations and to insist that negotiations resume.

"Our meeting with the NMB was positive and we are optimistic that resumption of negotiations will be productive," said TWU-IAM Association Director Sito Pantoja. "It's now time for the company to keep its word and give our members the industry-leading contract they promised. I thank our members for their incredible patience during this process."

"The delays in this process have been frustrating for our members but they have remained fully supportive of the Association," said TWU-IAM Association Vice Director Alex Garcia. "We will use this opportunity to finally close these negotiations, if American Airlines is a willing partner."
